SPECTATOR OF WAR AT CLOSE QUARTERS

Mike M. Rice Was There—Like a Duck.

Mike M. Rice returned to the city yesterday after an absence of several months. Leaving Phoenix last fall shortly after a return from Alaska, where he had been for several years, he went to Globe and was employed until a month ago on the Daily Globe.

Feeling the need of rest and recreation he went to El Paso to watch the revolution, and perhaps saw as much of it in the vicinity of Juarez as anybody not actively participating in the affray.

For a week previous to the capture of Juarez he was in the camp of Madero every day and had many interviews with him, Orozco and Garibaldi.

He held a pass from the American military commandant good for any point along the line from El Paso east to Ojinaga; that is, any part of the line under the surveillance of the Fourth cavalry. He also brought back with him a pass from Orozco good anywhere along the border.

Mr. Rice was in Juarez the day of the capture by the rebels and on the following day. He gathered many incidents of the battle that have not yet found their way into print for the reason that the regular war correspondents did not appear on the scene until the war clouds had rolled away.

COMBS TO MATCH.

When one's shoes, hat, parasol and bag must match the frock, or be the dominant color color in it, it seems only natural that combs should be included in the scheme, also.

For this purpose there are combs inlaid with gold, silver and platinum, and artistically set with semi-precious stones. The gray combs are especially lovely decorated with silver and turquoise.

The majority of these fancy combs come with high tops, and the greater portion of the real tortoise shell needs no other ornamentation than the exquisite carving.

The popular butterfly motif is one of the prettiest designs, although conventional, and there are oriental designs in a large variety of patterns. —Philadelphia Times.

MOTOR CYCLE DEPARTMENT

Council Will Buy Machine for Cop—Determined to Make Avenues Safe—
Names of Committeemen
Are Announced.

At a meeting of the city council held yesterday afternoon in the city recorder's office, the names of the councilmen assigned to the various committees were read by Mayor Christy. The committees are as follows:

Streets and alleys—Councilmen Cliney, McDermott and McElroy.
Fire, water and lights—Warren, McElroy and Cliney.

Ordinances—McElroy, Warren and McDermott.

Public buildings and grounds—Councilmen Cliney, McDermott and Warren.

Board of health—Mayor, council and health officer.

That the general disapproval of automobile and motorcycle speeding on Central avenue had been made known to the council and that the danger to pedestrians and those driving horses was too obvious to be ignored was proven when action was taken yesterday to assign a member of the police department to Center street to do duty on a motorcycle and enforce the speed regulations.

The speed limit in the city is at present ten miles an hour, with a twelve mile limit further out on Center. An ordinance was submitted to the council some time ago asking that the inside speed limit be raised to twelve miles and the outside limit to fifteen. No action has as yet been taken, but in view of the well known tendency of chauffeurs to run their cars a little over instead of under the prescribed limit, it is believed that the majority of the citizens would favor a reduction of the present speed limit rather than an increase, however slight.

The high speeds maintained by drivers on Center avenue, although not up to this time the cause of an accident, have given many people a narrow escape from collision with the rapidly moving cars and cycles, and a recent editorial in The Republican, which pointed out the absurdity of waiting until an accident, or series of accidents, should occur before instituting a reform in the enforcement of the speed regulations, was considered apropos by the people of the city, and particularly by those living on Center street.

The drivers who disregard the speed regulations on Center hereafter will be taken into custody as in other places where regard for life and limb makes the observance of the speed limit obligatory under penalty of the law. A motor cycle will be purchased for the officer detailed for the duty, and the new department of the city police is expected to develop efficiency, and be of service in protecting the people of the city from the cars of reckless speed maniacs.

An important matter in connection with the construction of the proposed sewerage system was considered, when it was stated that a large contractor had asked to be permitted to submit a bid to the council for work not including the district at present under sewerage contract. The council authorized by congress. The request was finally granted, the council reserving the right to accept or reject the bid as they should determine after receiving it.

It was stated by the contractor who submitted the request that he would be willing to have his plans and specifications pass through the hands of Olmstead and Gillette, engineers of Los Angeles, who have been consulted by the city council, for their approval. The council intends to defer any action in the matter of accepting bids for constructing the sewer until they have referred the bids with all drawings and specifications, to competent consulting engineers, whose verdict as to cost, materials, general practicability and economy would largely determine the success or failure of the bidder.

The members of the council are not satisfied that it would be best to let the entire contract to one firm, or to sell the entire bond issue to a single brokerage or banking house. The date on which the bid of the contractor will be received was not announced.

BROOM THE DISHES.

Using a whisk-broom to clean dishes is better than scraping them with a knife, says the Ladies Home Journal. Right after clearing the table the broom will be found useful for this purpose especially if it is dampened occasionally.

DIRECTORS LUNCH AND TALK BUSINESS

Board of Trade Considering a Fall Advertising Campaign.

The directors of the board of trade met again yesterday for a business luncheon at the noon hour and devoted most of the time to a discussion of the subject of advertising. The directors had as their guests, C. L. Seagraves of Chicago, general colonization agent of the Santa Fe railroad company, and W. S. Goldsworthy, the general agent of the local line.

Mr. Seagraves is well known in Phoenix as he has been here frequently, and through his department of the railroad this valley has received in times past some of its best advertising. He is interested in Phoenix both because he likes its people and because it is fast becoming an important point on the Santa Fe system, the center of a region in the prosperity of which he is officially concerned. He is here now on a general tour of inspection and not for any specific purpose so far as learned, but he improved the opportunity to confer with the board of directors on the advertising needs of the valley.

In the course of his remarks Mr. Seagraves made many valuable suggestions and outlined one specific plan that appealed strongly to the board, in which he offered to co-operate very liberally. It included the furnishing of a moving picture machine and a couple of hundred slides, a man to operate it and a lecturer to address the people throughout the region between Ohio and Colorado. The plan suggested appealed very strongly to the board, but to make it a success would require other activities on the part of the board involving the expenditure of funds not now available, so the matter, which was merely a suggestion on the part of Mr. Seagraves, would have to be further considered. In any event it probably would not be taken up until fall.

The work of the Los Angeles branch of the board of trade was also discussed at length and it was decided to keep it open all summer instead of closing it on July first, as had been contemplated.

HEARD IN THE LOBBIES

People are continually forgetting the significance of little things. They say and do the little things with an abandon and carelessness that says, or rather shouts, "It doesn't matter. Too small for attention." Which brings to mind the fact that the Creator himself has no aversion to little things. Some people are more sensitive than others. Some men could rest under an elephantine mass of obloquy and smile like T. R. all through it. Others suffer under the weight of a featherlike slight. Of the former there is no suitable example to cite. Of the latter Gerry Schuler is the personification. Last evening about six o'clock a number of Elks came to the Stag to collar Frank Shedd, who was due for an initiation at the club rooms. He was nowhere to be found. They waited, and finally Shedd came. He went up stairs, came down again, and—got away. Instead, then, of pitying themselves for being easy money, and asleep at the switch when the president's train went by, they turned on Schuler, and accused him of having "tipped" Shedd off. In reply Schuler said, "—". And Mr. Taylor afterward, she said: "He is the original Billy" all right,—but not the one I thought he was. Yes, I like him very much. He is so—different. He conversation is so—unusual, and his manner is so strange. He said he was a prohibitionist. Is that so?" No reply. Billie had gone in by the side entrance.

Someone once ventured to advance the opinion that a man who has never been nick named is N. G. This statement was considered justifiable for various reasons, among which is the fact that a short name is too long for a good fellow, and a long name is too short for the other kind. Some people believe that "Fther" is never loved as much as "Dad." This may be an error. In this connection it might be announced that "the original Billie Taylor" is now stopping at the Commercial. His name was once supposed to be W. D. Taylor, but no one remembers the date on which this name was last uttered. He has become "the original Billie" to all the overall dealers in Arizona, California, and New Mexico. An amusing thing occurred a few days ago. A sentimental young thing who had been studying Nell Brinkley heard that "the original Billie" was stopping at the Commercial. Expecting to see the handsome, square jawed hero of pictorial fame she asked for an introduction. She got it. In less than half an hour Billie had sold her a complete sample line of overalls, which, he said, would be much appreciated by her father and brothers. When asked to give her opinion of Mr. Taylor afterward, she said: "He is the original Billy" all right,—but not the one I thought he was. Yes, I like him very much. He is so—different. He conversation is so—unusual, and his manner is so strange. He said he was a prohibitionist. Is that so?" No reply. Billie had gone in by the side entrance.

In the most notable period of intellectual development men wore beards and mustaches. Many years ago I. Silversmith wandered through a gallery of sculpture, and standing before the bust of Homer, he decided then and there to wear a full beard when he grew up. He failed to take nature into account. His beard refused to grow, and the sole hirshute adornment of his captivating face is a small, but neat mustache. He curls it and combs it assiduously, hoping that it may take on European points at some time in the distant future. Few men make a better appearance than Mr. Silversmith. He dresses in excellent taste, and is positively, and without doubt the most handsome man the Ford has entertained for many a month with the single exception of Edward Shaw.

CLEANING RUGS.

The easiest and most effective method of cleaning rugs I discovered last house cleaning time, says a writer in the Denver Times. The rugs were laid on bed-springs right side up and then thoroughly beaten, the dirt falling out upon the ground.
